

Yes, the rules should be revised.

All providers should be required to implement the 'network' access method. This will afford all customers equal access to E-911 service.

'Handset access' limits E-911 access to those with specific phones, although all must pay for the service. It is highly unfair when life-saving messages are involved.